

Recognition for Pulse Secure as Ingram Micro Emerging Vendor of the Year

Pulse Secure has received the Emerging Vendor Award from Ingram Micro Inc., the world's largest wholesale technology distributor. Presented during Ingram Micro Experience 2018, the win celebrates the increasing demand and brand awareness within the IT channel for Pulse Secure as an Emerging Vendor.

Nearly 30 vendors earned the title of 'Vendor of the Year' across more than two dozen high profile technology categories including Cloud, consumer technology, advanced solutions and consumer and global markets. The winning partners were evaluated across a variety of criteria and key performance indicators, including collaboration, marketing and sales.

"The channel is home to tens of thousands of incredible and innovative organisations that realise the business value in going-to-market with Ingram Micro," said Jennifer Anaya, vice president, marketing, Ingram Micro. "We are honoured to present the Emerging Vendor Award to Pulse Secure for going above and beyond with Ingram Micro to better serve the needs of our channel partners and help their end-customers achieve their business goals faster and with greater engagement and accountability."

"Pulse Secure recognises the value of its relationship with Ingram Micro and appreciates this Emerging Vendor Award which highlights our excellence within the field of Secure Access for the next generation," said Aaron Moroson, Sr. Director, WW Distribution for Pulse Secure. "Having strong go-to-market relationships is essential in the delivery of high value solutions that allow our channel partners to secure critical infrastructure and deliver long term success to their end customers."
